Shared Principles and Practices for Putting Purpose First in American Higher Education

1. Higher education should be a launching pad toward a meaningful career, empowering students with the knowledge to make good choices, the structures to explore available opportunities, and the tools needed for success.
2. Career exploration and planning must be intentional and start early in the continuum of the educational experience.
3. States, systems and institutions must build a culture of purpose across all tiers in higher education, including education policy makers, administrators, faculty, staff, and amongst their students.
